

Food Security & the Economy

Many people don't recognize the detrimental affects caused from buying imported fruits and vegetables from large-scale agribusinesses

Buying food locally, such as from local farmer's markets, helps to support small businesses in your community

Buying foods locally keeps money in the community longer and provides employment opportunities in the community

Policies need to be developed to support local businesses and build the local economy